

To keep our sprint on the schedule we made sure that each teammate was assigned their task along with its due date. We also assigned a partner for each teammate so that if someone gets stuck they can easily ask for help and move on. Because of this, everyone was able to finish their task on time and no delays were truly present. We were able to finish on time since we started really early and distributed the tasks well. We also decided to have more people work on each feature so that blocks were able to be overcome by sheer manpower. We reminded anyone who seemed to be falling behind to get back on track and helped them whenever they needed it.
